Protesters fear election was compromised

Robocalls. Voters say they feel cheated and want the feds to do something about it

A diverse crowd of about 150 turned out on a sunny Sunday afternoon at River and Osborne to voice their displeasure over the robocalls scandal.

"A lot of people are worried.... Was this a fair result?" asked Josh Brandon, organizer of Winnipeg's rally, which ended in front of the constituency office of Conservative MP Joyce Bateman on Corydon.

Brandon said Elections Canada should conduct full investigations and, if necessary, call byelections.

"Obviously it's worth it. We can't have a country where people's right to vote is compromised."

Details

- 27 cities took part in the National Day of Action Against Election Fraud.
- There were 31,000 reports of violations during the May, 2, 2011, election.
- 57 ridings were affected, including Winnipeg South Centre and Elmwood-Transcona.

Krista Robinson, 25, said she heard from neighbours and friends in Winnipeg South Centre about the odd phone calls.

"My concern is that it's hard enough to get people my age to (vote) in the first place.

"If they have little faith in the political system to begin with, they're now less likely to vote," added Robinson, whose parents Joan and Dale drove in from Miami, Man., to attend.

"As a leader, (Prime Minister Stephen Harper) needs to step up," said protester Jonathan Ventura. His sentiments were later echoed by speakers Kevin Lamoureux, MP for Winnipeg North, and former MP Judy Wasylycia-Leis.

Pair arrested after store theft

Police dogs were used to track down two suspects following a commercial robbery early Saturday morning.

Officers responded to a convenience store in the 400 block of Springfield Road around 2:45 a.m. and learned two males had stolen a quantity of cigarettes before fleeing the area.

Members of the canine unit were able to successfully track the suspects to a nearby residence, where the pair were arrested.

Coach suspended for violent outburst

A hockey coach who threw sticks and other equipment onto the ice in a violent outburst during a playoff game was suspended 12 games Saturday by the Manitoba Junior Hockey League.

Dauphin Kings head coach and general manager Marlin Murray's profanity-laced tantrum was caught on video near the end of a 5-1 loss to the Winnipeg Saints on Thursday.

He was suspended two games for a gross misconduct penalty and a 10-game match penalty for physical harassment of referees Brett Montsion and Ryan Galley. It is unclear what sparked the outburst.

Video of the incident made its way onto YouTube, though MJHL commissioner Kim Davis said the suspension would have been handed out regardless of the publicity. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sixth homicide. Cross Lake woman moved to city less than a year ago

SHANE GIBSON

Funeral services are being planned for a woman originally from Cross Lake identified by police as Winnipeg's sixth homicide victim of 2012.

Belinda McKay, 38, was found dead in an apartment in the 400 block of Edmonton Street by a security guard, who called police to the suite around 7:50 p.m. Friday.

Police will only say McKay was found with upper-body injuries and won't release a cause of death pending an autopsy.

Bernice Paupanekis, 43, a life-long friend of McKay's, told Metro McKay has many relatives in Cross Lake, and the community was in shock as news of her death spread.

"I just right away fell down when I heard — she was my friend," said Paupanekis over the phone from Cross Lake Sunday. "She was a great person."

Paupanekis said McKay had two children, and moved to Winnipeg with her son last summer so he could be closer to treatment for a medical condition. Her daughter is still living on the reserve, located about 120 kilometres south of Thompson by air.

Another person in the suite when McKay was found received medical attention as a precaution, say police, who didn't release more information other than to say the person is not a suspect.

As investigators headed in the front door of the apartment Sunday morning, Len Johnson left through the back door. The 66-year-old has lived in the building for six years but says he's leaving because of the crime and violence in the area.

"I'm moving, I'm out of here," he said. "It's everywhere. You can't walk up the laneway without somebody bumping you off."

Stobbe. 'I should have been able to stop it'

A Manitoba man accused of murdering his wife sobbed Friday as he testified for the second day in his own defence at his second-degree murder trial in Winnipeg.

"It was confirmation of my worst fears," Mark Stobbe cried as he recalled being told Beverly Rowbotham had been slain in their backyard. "What it meant was I should have been able to stop it."

He has already testified that he didn't kill Rowbotham in October 2000, move her body or clean up the outside of their St. Andrews home, where the Crown alleges she was bludgeoned to death with a hatchet.

"I spent a lot of nights looking out windows, wondering whether I was watching TV while she was getting killed in the backyard."

The Crown is arguing that Stobbe killed his wife while their sons slept, stuffed her body in a car, drove it to a parking lot 15 kilometres away in Selkirk, then bicycled home.

Under cross-examination, the Crown suggested Stobbe added some 20 new details since he gave a statement to police following his wife's murder.

Stobbe said he knew his lawyers would take him through the events surrounding his wife's death. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Province to table budget April 17, minister says

The Manitoba government says it will table its budget April 17, when the legislature resumes sitting.

Grow-ops. Marijuana sting nets 3,300 plants

Manitoba Mounties have dismantled 10 marijuana grow operations throughout the province.

RCMP say 3,300 marijuana plants have been seized as part of a five-week operation, dubbed Project District.

They say the seizures have prevented more than a million marijuana joints from reaching the streets.

Investigators also seized $34,000 in cash and specialized grow equipment typically used by organized crime groups.

Fire officials have classified six of the raided properties as unfit for human habitation.

Vikileaks raises debate about handling of divorce records

Privacy. Public Safety Minister Vic Toews' case has prompted questions on whether peeking into divorce files should be allowed

When details of Vic Toews' difficult divorce were splashed across Twitter, many Canadians shared a commiserating shudder with the public safety minister.

Those who've been through an ugly split involving litigation know some of the most intimate details of their lives are often contained in publicly accessible records.

That includes not just bitter affidavits but social insurance numbers, tax returns, mortgage statements, investment details — the list goes on. Even if a case is settled prior to going before a judge, the files remain.

Some family-law and privacy experts suggest the time has come to change the way divorce records are handled.

Toews last week obtained a court order to see who had accessed his divorce file — parties to the litigation and journalists would not be listed. But that didn't change the public nature of the file itself.

Toronto-area lawyer Andrew Feldstein says one of his clients was ostracized by many friends after a divorce. Feldstein heard through the grapevine many of the couple's acquaintances went to take a look at the court filings.

"It also gives one side a very large advantage in the negotiation of the matrimonial dispute, because when you put something in a court file, it's subject to absolute privilege," Feldstein says.

"When the media goes and reads a court file, the media can say these are allegations contained in the court file.... That means there's no ability to sue for slander or libel at the end of the day."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Counter-argument

Critics warn that protecting the identities of Canadians in family-law cases would only undermine the concept of the open legal system, where the public — and the media by extension — is entitled to know what is going on.

- Chris Waddell, director of Carleton University's school of journalism and communication, says the value of having the records remain public clearly outweighs the few times a couple's divorce files are perused.
- "One thing that's important about politicians is their character. It's in the voter's interest to know the character of politicians, and this might be information that would help you determine the character of a politician," he offers as an example.

Gays, 'emo' youths in Iraq targeted by rising violence

Youths who identify themselves as so-called "emos" are being brutally killed at an alarming rate in Iraq, where militias have distributed hit lists of victims and security forces say they are unable to stop crimes against the subculture that is widely perceived in Iraq as being gay.

Officials and human-rights groups estimated as many as 58 Iraqis who are either gay or believed to be gay have been killed in the last six weeks alone — forecasting what experts fear is a return to the rampant hate crimes against homosexuals in 2009.

U.S. soldier kills 16 Afghan civilians

Deepening crisis. Rogue army sergeant accused in shooting spree that threatens reconciliation after Qur'an burnings

A U.S. army sergeant is alleged to have opened fire Sunday on Afghan villagers as they slept, killing 16 people — mostly women and children — in an attack that reignited fury at the U.S. presence following a wave of deadly protests over Americans burning Qur'ans.

The attack threatened the deepest breach yet in U.S.-Afghan relations, raising questions in Washington and Kabul about why American troops are still fighting in Afghanistan after 10 years of conflict and the killing of Osama bin Laden.

The killing spree, the worst atrocity committed by U.S. forces during the Afghan war, comes amid deepening public outrage spurred by last month's Qur'an burnings and an earlier video purportedly showing American Marines urinating on dead Taliban militants.

The Qur'an burnings sparked weeks of violent protests and attacks that left some 30 Afghans dead, despite an apology from President Barack Obama. Six U.S. service members were also killed by their fellow Afghan soldiers, although the tensions had just started to calm down.

Residents said Sunday's attack began around 3 a.m. in two villages in Panjwai district, a rural region outside Kandahar that is the cradle of the Taliban and where coalition forces have fought for control for years.

The villages are about 500 metres from a U.S. base.

- A U.S. official says the American suspected of killing 16 Afghan villagers Sunday is a soldier from Washington state who was assigned to a remote special-operations site.
- The U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, says the soldier acted alone, leaving his base in southern Afghanistan and opening fire on sleeping families.
- The official says he was assigned to support a special-operations unit of either Green Berets or Navy SEALs.

Only Cleansing Can Make You Feel This Good

If there was only one thing you could do to improve your health and increase energy it would be a total body cleanse. Everyday your body is under attack from pollution, pesticides, chemicals and toxins. They are in the food we eat, the water we drink, and the air we breathe. No matter your lifestyle, no one is escaping this constant barrage of toxins.

CleanseSMART Advanced Total Body Cleanse

TESTIMONIAL - Thank you so much! "My fiancée and I had always thought that we were relatively healthy at 47 years of age and had fairly decent eating habits in that we were conscious of what we put into our bodies - fresh fruit and veggies, as little processed meats, white flour, sugar, salt, etc. but over the last 6 months or so we were beginning to feel sluggish and that our age was finally catching up to us - very rapidly. We searched the internet and narrowed our search to CleanseSMART's 30 day cleanse. We are very happy to report that after only five days both of us felt an amazing change in our bodies - lighter, healthier and more energized! Thank you so very much for your expertise in formulating this cleanse." - 2008-01-16

TESTIMONIAL - Enjoyable Experience "This was my 'first cleanse', and I can truly say it has been an enjoyable experience. I followed the directions, and made changes in my diet. The first few days, I began to notice some changes in my energy levels and 'waste elimination'. I also could tell the products were working, as my skin had mild breakouts. Towards the end of the program, the breakouts had cleared up, I was more regular in waste elimination, and I lost 7 pounds." - 2011-10-04

Swiss voters turn down longer holidays

European austerity. Referendum tested how comfortable the Swiss feel about their traditional safe-haven economy

Swiss voters rejected raising paid vacation to six weeks from four.
JOHN HEILPRIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who turns down a long vacation? Known for their work ethic, Swiss citizens appear to be leading the way on European austerity, rejecting a minimum six weeks paid holiday a year.

Switzerland counted ballots Sunday for several national referendums, including one pushed by a union to raise the minimum holiday from four weeks to the standard six used in Germany, Italy, Russia and other European nations.

The nation's 26 cantons (states) also held voting on local measures to deal with everything from demonstrators to prostitutes.

The Swiss heeded warnings from government and business that more vacation would raise labour costs and put the economy at risk. Swiss public broadcaster SSR said two-thirds of voters and all of the cantons had rejected the measure, which required majority approval of all federal and cantonal voters.

"In rejecting the initiative, citizens have kept a sense of reality," said Hans-Ulrich Bigler, director of the Swiss Union of Arts and Crafts, which represents around 300,000 businesses.

HOW DO WE PAY FOR RAPID TRANSIT?

URBAN COMPASS
Colin Fast
metronews.ca/urbancompass

Now that the city seems ready to abandon its plan to hit transit users with a 20-cent levy to pay for the second phase of BRT, it's time to figure out how we're going to move this project forward.

Fare increases don't make sense when you're trying to attract new users. Property taxes are an option, but there's no shortage of demands on that revenue stream. And there's no sign the mayor is any closer to getting that share of the provincial sales tax he keeps asking for.

But there is an option that could raise money for rapid transit, encourage more people to take the bus, and potentially eliminate a few surface parking lots at the same time: A parking tax.

Following the examples of Vancouver and Montreal, Winnipeg could — with the province's blessing — implement a modest tax on non-residential parking with all revenue being dedicated to expanding transit services.

Expanding transit services

"Winnipeg could ... implement a modest tax on non-residential parking.... While the exact specifications would be up for debate ... a tax of less than a dollar a day for the average driver could easily generate the same $6 million the city would have collected from the transit levy."

While the exact specifications would be up for debate (downtown or city-wide, only on paid spaces or all spaces, higher rates for surface lots than parkades?), a tax of less than a dollar a day for the average driver could easily generate the same $6 million the city would have collected from the transit levy.

Many drivers are likely reading this and howling that they already pay enough for parking. But no, you really don't. Winnipeg actually has among the lowest parking fees in Canada, according to the 2011 Parking Rate Survey from real-estate firm Colliers International. Even drivers in small cities like Halifax, Regina, Saskatoon and Victoria pay $15 to $30 more per month for parking.

And if bumping up those rates is the tipping point that gets more people to consider alternate forms of transportation — reducing the demand for parking lots in the process — then that's a bonus.

Furthermore, drivers need to realize that investing in rapid transit benefits them as well. Improved service will draw more transit users, which means fewer cars on the road, less congestion and faster commute times.

So Winnipeggers, would you rather spend a few extra dollars a month on parking, or on burning gas while sitting in traffic? Because either way, you're going to pay. Unless you decide to hop on the bus, of course.

Doghouse done up Wright

Architectural one-off

Master-crafted modest dog digs

Frank Lloyd Wright designed hundreds of landmark buildings during a prolific career that spanned more than seven decades. But in what is widely considered a first and only for the famed architect, Wright indulged a young boy's humble request for a doghouse in 1956 and sent him designs for the structure.

No charge for the plan

"I was probably his youngest and poorest client."
Jim Berger, 68

Berger poses with his dog, Sir Charles Barkley, holding the letter he received from famed architect Frank Lloyd Wright who he had asked to design a doghouse for him. Berger was 12 when he wrote to Wright in 1956 asking him to design a home for his dog, Eddie. Wright indulged the young boy's humble request for a doghouse and sent him designs for the structure.

12-year-old's request

Wright designed Berger's family's home, prompting the boy to write to the architect.

- "I would appreciate it if you would design me a do ghouse, which would be easy to build, but would go with our house," read the letter.
- Berger explained that he would pay Wright from the money he made from his paper route.

Triangular design

3x5x3

Berger rebuilt the doghouse last year with his brother, using the original plans. The roughly three-feet-wide-by-five-feet-long-by-three-feet-high doghouse has a sharp triangular shape, with a sloping shingled roof. It is made of Philippine mahogany and weighs about 113 kilograms.

Elizabeth Olsen stars in Silent House. HANDOUT

Elizabeth Olsen ramps up the real-time fear

Acting scared.
Younger Olsen sister says playing horror movie roles comes naturally to her

scene@metronews.ca

Elizabeth Olsen admits taking the lead in the real-time horror movie Silent House didn't pose too much of a challenge, acting-wise.

"Becoming scared or something like that isn't the hardest thing, I think, for me to do," she says. "It's much harder in my mind to do something comedic timing-wise. I find that to be a huge talent."

The ease with which she finds acting scared aside, Olsen is a natural for the horror genre because she's also a huge fan.

"I've been a fan of horror movies since I started watching movies because I was the youngest of four kids, and my brother — who's the oldest in the family — loves scary movies, and I'm very much his sister," she says.

"Arachnophobia was one of the very first movies I grew up on — at a very young age — so that was something I loved. And when I was probably in fourth grade, a friend of mine and I would sneak into her stepfather's cabinet of movies when they were asleep and we'd watch all the old classics, like Carrie and Children of the Corn."

Despite her love of scary movies, Olsen admits she's not the best company for viewing them, though.

"My friends really don't like seeing movies with me because I am the loudest one in the audience," she says. "I laugh at things that apparently aren't funny to anyone else. And I scream and then laugh after screaming. I'm a very vocal audience member."

And as much as she loves a good scare, there's one movie she simply refuses to watch: Open Water, the lost-at-sea indie fright fest that put Silent House co-directors Chris Kentis and Laura Lau on the map.

"I am terrified of the ocean and sharks, and there are just some movies that you just really don't want to put yourself through seeing.

And I know from so many people that's a terrifying film, and I know all about the movie and I know the trailer and I know what happened when they were filming with real sharks. I can't see that movie. It would scare me more, and I'm already terrified of the water."

Rising star

Getting choosy

Olsen has recently found her profile in the industry skyrocketing. "I did not think that after a year of trying to work I would be in a position where I got to choose things," she says. One of those things is writer-director John Krokidas' Kill Your Darlings, the beat generation drama co-starring Daniel Radcliffe, Jack Huston and Ben Foster, filming this month.

Lorax tops ticket sales

Dr. Seuss' the Lorax has easily beaten Edgar Rice Burroughs' John Carter at the weekend box office. Studio estimates Sunday put The Lorax at No. 1 for the second-straight weekend as the animated adventure based on the children's book took in $39.1 million. That raised its 10-day domestic total to $122 million, making The Lorax the year's top-grossing release.

What is Whitney worth?

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Although Whitney Houston's daughter Bobbi is set to inherit her mother's entire "fortune," a 2007 legal document uncovered by Radar Online shows that Houston's estate might not be as much as people are assuming.

An income and expense declaration during her divorce proceedings with Bobby Brown states that at the time, Houston had $40,000 in cash, $225,000 in stocks, and earned in excess of $1 million for performances, per the site.

She declared owning two homes: one house in New Jersey, which was worth $6.5 million (with $3.247 million owed on the estate), and a townhouse in Atlanta, which was worth $1.244 million (a reported $1,046,603 was owed on that property).

"Whitney's bottom line was that she had $10,242,931 in various assets, and had debts totalling $4,294,014," states Radar Online.

Two things that might change the bottom line:

1. Any "income declaration" you're going to show your ex-husband who is seeking your hard-earned money is going to hide a ton of cash.

2. Houston's recording contract was not listed as it was "considered separate property due to the prenuptial agreement the former couple had."

However, it's important to remember that Houston was also one of the world's best-selling music artists — having sold over 170 million albums, singles and videos worldwide. In 2001 she signed the biggest record deal in music history with Arista/BMG for $100 million to deliver six new albums, on which she would also earn royalties. Yes, that contract is "separate" from that 2007 document but still, you would think there would be more cash than just $6 million.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

While studies differ on whether stay-at-home moms or working moms are happier, there are many other factors to a woman's happiness. ISTOCK

Stay-at-home mom versus working mom

Who's happier? It all depends on who you ask. Our Mommyish writer looks into the schism and wonders what it says about us

If you go by the latest British government study, stay-at-home moms are as content and satisfied with their lives as those who choose to work.

And yet another recent U.S. study, this one by care.com, found that eight out of 10 mothers enjoy being a working parent. In fact, a whopping 64 per cent said that work does not interfere with their ability to be a good parent. (I find this shocking, by the way.)

While the results of both studies are actually quite uplifting, I always take studies like these with a grain of salt.

Why? Because, like any controversial parenting topic out there, you can find whatever it is you're looking for on Google.

For example, I typed "co-sleeping is safe" into Google and got 23,800,000 results. I then typed "co-sleeping is dangerous" and up came 2,650,000 results ("co-sleeping kills" gets 1,570,000).

My point is that you'll find tens of thousands of official "studies" and "expert opinions" on any given topic — and you'll choose to believe whatever it is you were looking for in the first place.

The same applies to the whole working mom vs. stay-at-home mom debate.

It's astounding to me how many studies have been conducted on the subject. And yet a woman's happiness level is based on so many factors that have nothing to do with research and statistics.

I have friends who stay at home who are very fulfilled. Actually, they're more than fulfilled! Most of them are busy, sure, but they still have time for daily workouts and social interaction (especially those with school-aged children).

I have an equal number of friends who have gone totally batty not working. In fact, they've chosen to go back to work for their own sanity even if they didn't need the money. (And, yes, they feel guilty about their decision.)

Of course, it would be nice if we all that choice — most women simply have to work for financial reasons — but that's a whole other topic. (Let it it be known that I also have friends who work and end up giving 100 per cent of their salary to their nanny.)

The same schism can be seen among the working moms I know (myself included).

We are forever feeling guilty about leaving our kids each day — despite what that care.com study claims — and yet we have even more guilt about not giving 100 per cent to our jobs because we're too busy focusing on our families.

Then there are the work-from-home moms, who have either the best or worst of both worlds — depending on how you look at it.

No matter what the "experts" tell us, only we know what works for our own family. And most moms I know need to be reminded of that every so often (OK, who are kidding? More like every day). Consider this your daily reminder.

Besides, if happiness could really be defined as stay-at-home mom versus working mother, we'd all have the golden answer. If only things were that simple…

Even young children can participate in meal preparation. Here's how:

- Let them tear foods like lettuce and pull grapes from vines.
- Have them set the oven timer and tell you when it's done.
- Allow them to push buttons on blenders, toasters and microwaves (with supervision).
- Get them to measure and then mix ingredients.

Wild Rice Casserole: an elegant side dish

This recipe serve six. THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

This three-step side dish idea is full of delicious dried fruits such as dates and apricots along with an apple to give you a sweet and tart tasting casserole.

Enjoy the Wild Rice Casserole alongside any family favourite roast or meat dish such as grilled chicken.

1 In a small saucepan set over medium-high heat, melt the butter; sauté the chopped onion and celery for 4 to 5 minutes or until they are soft.

2 Stir in the rosemary and thyme then remove the saucepan from the heat.

3 In a large bowl, combine the cooked wild and long grain rice mixture with onion mixture and stir in the dates, apple, ham, apricots, salt and pepper.

4 Spoon the wild rice mixture into a buttered 2-l (8-cup) baking dish. Cover the dish and bake it in 180 C (350 F) oven for about 30 minutes or until the casserole is hot.

Chips are not the healthiest choice for a snack to begin with. When you factor in that many popular options are deep fried and salty, the calories and sodium values shoot through the roof.

Cheetos (54 chips, 100 g)

600 cals, 40 g fat, 1,040 mg sodium
These cornmeal fried snacks have half your daily calories and sodium in one serving. A long list of ingredients including artificial flavours and colour is a red flag.

Equivalent

Eating 54 Cheetos is equivalent in fat to eating 10 mini messy chicken sandwiches from the kids' menu at Swiss Chalet.

Baked Lay's Chips (52 chips, 100 g)

400 calories, 6 g fat, 460 mg sodium
This is a much healthier snack in terms of fat and sodium with no perservaties. Just watch your portions.

QUEEN OF GREEN

I'm on a conference planning committee. What are some tips to host a "green" conference? Stephanie of Winnipeg, MB

A green conference (or event) incorporates environmental initiatives to minimize its negative impact on the planet. And it addresses everything you'd expect —energy and water consumption, transportation, food and drink, brochures, waste, and more.

Before you dive into planning a low-carbon, carbon-neutral and/or zero-waste conference, you'll need buy-in. Get an organizing committee together with members who are dedicated to making your event as sustainable as possible.

How will you advertise? Paper posters and direct mail are so yesterday. Choose paperless promotional activities like e-newsletters, a button on your website, Facebook and Twitter. Check out e-services like Eventbrite — they take care of invites and tickets (with instant RSVP option).

As for conference materials like session descriptions, presenter bios and handouts, post all conference materials online (and make it phone friendly). Let attendees know in advance that it's a paperless conference.

Does your city boast a green building or two? Your venue doesn't have to be LEED-certified. It could also be a green hotel — the Green Key Eco-Rating Program rates hotels and resorts on environmental performance (see greenkeyglobal.com).

And choose a central location with access to public transit.

To tackle carbon emissions, consider purchasing gold standard carbon offsets or have your event Bullfrog Powered. Bullfrog Power is Canada's leading 100 per cent green electricity provider. They'll ensure that as much clean, emissions-free electricity is injected into the regional grids as the event uses.

'I'm 31 years old, I couldn't really ask for anything else'

Raise your glass. Entrepreneur Manjit Minhas has brewed a $120 million business

TURNING POINT
Teresa Kruze
life@metronews.ca

Manjit Minhas' lemonade stand in Calgary had a revolving sign.

The 10-year-old entrepreneur, along with her brother Ravinder, would charge the kids in their neighbourhood 25 cents a cup. When an adult would approach, their sign switched to 50 cents.

"My mom wasn't impressed," Manjit laughs, "but we thought we were really smart."

By the time they got to University, Manjit and her brother had created an in-house brand of spirits for their parent's liquor store chain, and then got into the beer business by creating Mountain Crest Lager.

Manjit Minhas, CEO of Minhas Creek Craft Brewing Co. PROVIDED

Their "Buck a Beer" marketing campaign caught fire and the profits started to roll in.

In 2006 they bought one of the oldest breweries in the U.S., and became the youngest brewery owners in the World.

Five years later, their companies posted revenues in excess of $120 million.

"I'm 31 years old, I couldn't really ask for anything else. I have a healthy family, friends and business. We've been at this a decade and there have been failures along the way but they are good learning points," says Manjit.

Now, that's turning the lemons of business into brewery gold.

That's the spirit!

Advice from an entrepreneur

- Believe in your product. Have passion for what you do.
- Set your goals. They will provide a vision for yourself and the company.
- Keep a tight pocket in the beginning. Expenses can go out of control and make or break you. It's important to keep a close eye on overhead.
- There is no substitute for hard work. Success is not built overnight, it takes lots of hard work and perseverance.
- Your product or service should be flexible. It's remarkable how a little bit of tweaking in product or service can make a difference in the tough times.

Nesbitt clinches Grand World Cup

Canada's Christine Nesbitt won the 1,000 metres at the speedskating finals Sunday to take her second overall title in two days and clinch the women's Grand World Cup. Nesbitt, from London, Ont., who won the 1,500 World Cup title on Saturday, claimed the last 1,000 race of the season in one minute 15.04 seconds, with Heather Richardson of the United States second, 0.73 seconds behind.

Ontario wins the Brier

Curling. Howard defeats Koe for the fourth Canadian title of his career

Glenn Howard didn't let the Brier Tankard slip through his fingers this time.

Often a finalist at the Canadian men's curling championship, Howard was building a reputation for losing championship games. He put that behind him as he led Ontario to a 7-6 win over Alberta's Kevin Koe in the final of the Tim Hortons Brier on Sunday.

Howard, third Wayne Middaugh, second Brent Laing and Craig Savill will represent Canada at the world men's championship March 31 to April 8 in Basel, Switzerland.

It was the sixth Brier final in seven years for Howard and his front end of Laing and Savill, but just their second victory. They won the Canadian title in 2007.

"Little bit of a monkey off our back, I think." Howard said. "I'm proud of the guys. They didn't miss anything. They brought it tonight."

Howard, 49, also won two Briers playing third for brother Russ in 1987 and 1993. They reached the Canadian final five times.

Middaugh, who skipped Ontario to Canadian and world titles in 1998, joined the Coldwater Curling Club team at third prior to this season after Richard Hart retired. Middaugh was given the Hec Gervais award that goes to the most valuable player in the playoffs.

Howard, Alberta's Kevin Martin and Manitoba's Jeff Stoughton are Canada's heavyweights in men's curling. The odds are one of those three will represent Canada at the 2014 Winter Olympics.

But four losses in five Brier finals from 2006 to 2011, plus falling to Martin in the final of the 2009 Olympic trials, raised questions about Howard's ability to finish the job.

He proved he could finish in Saskatoon. Ontario played five extra-end games in the round robin and Savill was ill with a stomach ailment, yet they topped the preliminary round at 10-1. Howard then dominated Manitoba's Rob Fowler 9-3 in the playoff game between the top two seeds.

Ontario completely controlled the first seven ends of the final, making no errors and pouncing on Alberta mistakes to lead 4-2 after five ends and 6-2 after six. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bronze for Fowler

Manitoba's Rob Fowler won the bronze medal at the Canadian men's curling championship with an 8-7 win in an extra end over Jamie Koe of Yukon and Northwest Territories.

- Fowler skipped Manitoba at the event for the first time in his career.
- He had finished the round-robin as the second seed but lost two straight playoff matches to settle for a spot in the third-place game.

NBA. Raptors let 13-point lead slip away against visiting Bucks

Ersan Ilyasova's 31 points and 12 rebounds led the visiting Milwaukee Bucks to a 105-99 win over the Toronto Raptors on Sunday.

Drew Gooden chipped in with 21 points for the Bucks (17-24) while Mike Dunleavy came off the bench to contribute 19 points, including a key three-pointer in the fourth quarter that helped his team pull ahead for good.

DeMar DeRozan led the way for the Raptors with 21 points while Jerryd Bayless had 16 points and six rebounds in a starting role for injured point guard Jose Calderon.

Toronto (13-28) has lost four of its last six games.

Leandro Barbosa made a big contribution off the bench for Toronto in the first half. The Brazilian scored 10 points in the first half but only picked up two in the second.

Raptors coach Dwane Casey wasn't pleased with the opening his team gave him in Saturday's 105-86 loss to the Pistons in Detroit, but the Raptors got a much better opening Sunday by hitting their first six shots from the field.

The Raptors held a nine-point lead after the first quarter and a five-point lead at the half. Their lead was down to a single point after the third quarter before the Bucks pulled away in the fourth.

Toronto's lead got as high as 13 points in the second quarter.

It was a much different start to the second half as Toronto only hit five shots from the field and saw the Bucks chip away until tying the game with just over four minutes remaining in the third.

The Raptors also turned the ball over six times in the third quarter as the Bucks took their first lead of the game with just over two minutes remaining in the quarter after a pair of Ilyasova free throws to make it 75-74.

Raptors centre Andrea Bargnani battles with the Bucks' Ersan Ilyasova. RICK MADONIK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Barbosa hit a three in the final minute to give the Raptors a one-point lead heading into the final quarter at 79-78.

The teams went back and forth in the final frame with seven lead changes in the first nine minutes of the fourth.

Beno Udrih gave the Bucks a four-point lead after hitting a pair of free throws. The Raptors were only able to get as close as two points as their shooting went cold down the stretch. THE CANADIAN PRESS
